Give Kids a Smile - Dallas 2021 DCDS Foundation at Work for Underserved Children

With repeat performances in life, people tend to want to be better, stronger, faster and achieve more the next time around. Speed bumps such as a pandemic can decelerate such plans, and this was quite evident when it came to planning Give Kids A Smile (GKAS) - Dallas 2021.

Last February's event invited over a thousand students to receive free screenings, hygiene bags and oral health presentations from a volunteer army of 50 dentists and 100 other dental professionals. Immediately following the successful event, ideas were discussed for broadening the scope for 2021. And immediately following that discussion, pandemic reality set in; changing scope, but not changing purpose. The need for education of underserved children on prevention of dental disease continues, so the show must go on!

Rei Iwase, DDS, director for the DCDS Foundation and coordinator for the Dallas GKAS event realized quickly that in-person screenings were out of the question. Many of the after school programs that GKAS served in the past are closed due to the pandemic, and many Dallas Independent School District (DISD) students are still opting to learn from home rather than in the classroom. Enter Plan B for the February 5th event: Virtual presentations and relying on teachers to distribute oral hygiene bags.

This plan abbreviated the need for volunteers, and ultimately 14 doctors and 14 dental school students were engaged to stage oral hygiene presentations via Zoom for DISD elementary school classrooms in low income areas.

In addition, the City of Dallas Park and Recreation Department Out of School Time Programs requested a recorded oral hygiene video to several hundred students. With the help of hygienists Stephanie Eisenmann, RDH and Mayra Ruiz, RDH; as well as Texas A&M College of Dentistry student Ashly Okoli, Dr. Iwase recorded clips that present the proper way to brush and floss, good nutrition, what a trip to the dentists is like and dentistry as a career. DCDS Foundation staff assisted by pulling the clips into an engaging video that was shown in several recreation centers.

Legislative Advocacy

egislative advocacy. This term is often used when discussing organized dentistry. Legislative advocacy is listed as one of the most important benefits to our members. The events of the past year have highlighted the importance of advocacy issues in the field of dentistry. As dentists, we had to deal with the consequences of having to shut down our offices except for emergency care. In addition, we dealt with new protocols to allow us to reopen safely and struggled to find PPE when there was a shortage from the dental suppliers. The Texas Dental Association (TDA) advocacy played an important role in helping dentists with these issues. Furthermore, a major success this past year was the ability to open our dental offices two weeks earlier than the initial plan thanks to the hard work of TDA advocacy team.

I had the opportunity to serve as the new dentist liaison to the TDA Council on Legislative and Regulatory Affairs (CLRA) for 2018 to 2020. While serving in that capacity, I was able to really see how our legislative advocacy works at a state level and how important that work is to our dayto-day practice of dentistry. During a Texas legislative session (like the one we are currently in now), the council and staff work hard to track each bill that gets introduced that could affect dentistry in some way. They then make sure organized dentistry's position is known to those decision makers in the legislative process. The council also brings forth a legislative agenda based on policy brought forth by the membership through the TDA House of Delegates. The agenda for this year includes a teledentistry bill and dealing with negative dental insurance practices like network leasing and retroactive denials. This year, Legislative Day — a day in which dentists from the state converge in Austin to meet with our legislators — will be held virtually. While this will be a change from years past, we hope it is just as effective.

On a local level, Dallas County Dental Society (DCDS) has an active Legislative Active Committee chaired by Dr. Jon Vogel. The purpose of this committee is to coordinate our legislative efforts locally. That starts with relationship building with our local representatives. We hope these relationships help assist legislators' understanding of any dental issues and help accomplish the goals of our society and dentists in Dallas County.

If you think this is important to you, one of the easiest ways to help the cause is to donate to our state political action committee, DENPAC. It's easy to sign up with a visit to the website www.denpac.org. One hundred percent of every donation goes directly towards candidates seeking election. With these contributions, we hope to gain access to elected officials making it easier to establish a longstanding relationship. If you would like to get more involved and have an interest in legislative matters, DCDS is always looking for volunteers to serve on our Legislative Action Committee. Impressions

I love what I do.

A s a child, adults and mentors around me would constantly ask, "What are you going to do when you grow up?" Without putting much thought into it seriously until I was in high school, my first response was always, "I don't know." The follow-up questions would be prodding into what I enjoyed and then the 'ah-ha' moment, "That's what you should do for a living!" Professional soccer player and video gamer didn't quite pan out for me.

When you break it down, what is exciting about our jobs? What is the allure that would lead a child to say they want to be a dentist when they grow up? I've never heard a kid say, "I can't wait to stick my hands in someone else's mouth and contort my body into all sorts of unhealthy positions so I can remove one more millimeter of decay on a tooth."

I have known I wanted to be a dentist since I was 12 years old. It had nothing to do with actual dentistry that got me interested in the profession. It was a simple statement my 7thgrade pottery teacher said to me. She noticed I really liked making pottery, and she said for a deliberate reason or not, maybe that means you're going to be a dentist. About two weeks later, I had a consultation with an orthodontist, and he had the coolest car. 12-year-old me put the two things together, and viola! I was going to be a dentist because I liked pottery and wanted to drive a really cool car.

Twenty-two years later, I am a dentist, but I don't drive a really cool car, and pottery isn't something that interests me at all. I think I would have broken my 12-year-old self's heart by informing him there are much easier ways to make enough money to buy a really cool car.

I have been practicing dentistry for eight years and exclusively studying dental and oral health topics for fourteen years. I can now say that I am what I wanted to grow up to be, and I am precisely where I want to be. I have finally started to love what I do. Surprisingly, this didn't start the day I finished my residency. My love for this profession was a convoluted path that, at times, seemed bleak that I would stay. As dentists, we really don't know if we will enjoy our work until we have invested a substantial amount of time in school and studying just to begin the process of practicing.

It took me years to break the selfdoubt cycle as a newer dentist because something did not turn out absolutely perfect. I would do ten different procedures in one day, and nine of them were excellent. My mind, however, would not let me focus on my successes. I would only focus on the one that could have been better.

Focusing on your less-thanexcellent work is a sure recipe for disaster. I had to put some serious thought into what I was doing that would make me happy. Happiness is when you realize you are giving service and you're not just a commodity. How do we see ourselves? Are you a community resource or a commodity? Choose to take the time to find what truly makes you happy in our profession.

My personal satisfaction with our profession comes from seeing families grow through all their different life stages and being there for them when they need me the most. There is nothing more satisfying than being able to alleviate someone's pain from a tooth that broke when they fell or the confidence built in them when you can take away one of their insecurities about their smile.

I also really love making efficient systems and processes. The wonderful thing about our profession is the variety of options we have available to pick what type of practice is right for us.

If you could do one thing, what would it be? If you got to do something that you loved to do, what would it be? I think everyone should take a few moments from time to time and ask these questions to themselves. For me, it is simple. I would be a dentist. Not just any kind of dentist, a happy dentist.

Happiness is when you realize you are giving service and you're not just a commodity. How do we see ourselves? Are you a community resource or a commodity? Choose to take the time to find what truly makes you happy in our profession. Take that happiness you find in your daily tasks and build it into your desire to serve. I hope all of us continue to be able to do what we love and find chances give back to our communities in such a great time of need. Stay safe and God bless.

Give Kids A Sm (GKAS)

Dr. Rei Iwase was not going to let the pandemic stop DCDS Foundation from hosting a 2021 GKAS event in Dallas. She worked closely with DISD and the DCDS Executive Office to organize another successful event. Volunteers were able to provide a virtual classroom educational presentation to approximately 760 students. 16 DCDS member dentists, 14 dental students from the Texas A&M University College of Dentistry and two hygienists volunteered their time to organize and/or participate in the on-line learning experiences. Oral hygiene bags for the students, assembled by DCDS staff, were delivered prior to the event. Please see page one for more information on the Dallas GKAS event.

News and perspective from dentists under 10 years of practice

by Gabrielle C. Dizon, DDS

It's All About the Little Things—Practice Builders for the New Dentist

Breaking into a competitive dental market as a newly graduated dentist is an overwhelming task. In most metropolitan areas, dental markets have become oversaturated. The increase in competition in popular practice locations, amongst many other factors, has led to the commoditization of dentistry. With this paradigm shift, it is important now more than ever, to create a personal brand to distinguish oneself from the crowd in order to become successful. The following practice builders are simple, cost-effective ways in which the new dentist can establish himself or herself as the new standout in his or her area.

Creating a positive experience for the patient starts with personal presentation. A strong first impression is paramount to winning over a patient's trust. A sharp and neat outward appearance is the first step in presenting oneself well, a tangible factor within our control in directing how others perceive us. Attention to precise details, such as a pressed white coat and scrubs or shined shoes invites patients to perceive one as meticulous and orderly; attributes that presumably translate through to the quality of one's work. A unique issue presented by the COVID-19 pandemic is the inability to meet our patients face to face. With masks, it's hard to establish a personable environment where the patient sees one as more than a doctor programmed to perform a robotic-like set of tasks. Wearing a photo badge can be helpful in adding a personalized and more approachable touch to the visit.

Empowering and supporting the dental team is equally as important in creating an impression as an excellent doctor. Much about a person can be said about how he or she treats those around himself or herself. It is important to treat each member of the team as a unique, valuable asset that is essential towards achieving the goal of providing the best possible care for the patient. Team members that believe in your ethics and vision will emulate and advocate your intentions and treatment plans when patients have questions or concerns. Simple gestures such as a verbal "thank you" or inviting input are excellent ways to show staff members that they are appreciated and respected. Making sure that team members are part of an inclusive environment is an important facet towards the comprehensive goal of creating a positive patient experience.

The patient should be the focus and center of creating the exceptional dental experience, a concept that serves as a measure for a clinician's success. Successful dentists consistently provide pleasant and positive dental experiences for their patients. Today's society demands swift and easy results; however, much more is required in order to create an excellent dental visit. Patients want to be heard and feel seen. One way to ensure this is to take the first Team members that believe in your ethics and vision will emulate and advocate your intentions and treatment plans when patients have questions or concerns.

couple minutes of any encounter to simply talk about anything other than dentistry. This allows the opportunity to create a personal connection with the patient by showing that he or she is cared about. Handwritten notes and follow up phone calls following appointments are easy ways to add a personal touch to a patient's visit. Personalizing each patient's experience removes the commoditized view of dentistry by shifting focus away from the quantitative dollar amount spent and redirecting attention towards quality of the experience and how it made them feel, creating perceived value.

In short, it can be discouraging and seem easy to feel lost amongst the masses, especially as a new dentist. These are just a few simple things each new dentist can build upon in creating his or her own personal branding methods. Many of the things that make for a successful career are built upon paying attention to the small details, which are often overlooked. When these little details are tended to, the big things, such as success and influence, fall into place. It's all about the little things.

Digital Implant Dentistry: From Exam to Restoration

JOHN W GANNON, DDS • BRENT DESUTTER, DDS

Dr. John Gannon completed dental school at the University of California, San Francisco and went on to complete his residency training at the University of Miami. He maintains a full-time practice in the Dallas area with a focus on dental implants, wisdom teeth, nerve reconstruction, jaw and TMJ surgery.

> Dr. Brent DeSutter graduated from the University of Texas Health Science Center - San Antonio Dental School in 2013 and completed a general practice residency at the VA Hospital in Portland, OR. In 2017 he started a private practice in East Dallas focusing on cosmetic and restorative implant dentistry.

Single unit implant restorations can be a fantastic option for a long-term esthetic solution. But often we rush into surgery without an understanding of what our final restoration will look like. Conventional treatment planning and analog models are helpful but have limitations. Using digital tools, we can plan our case with a better understanding of the potential surgical and restorative complications and can communicate this with our entire restorative team. With more efficient communication and better data, we can mitigate risk for both the surgeon and restorative dentist. The overall long term success and predictability is greatly improved with digital treatment planning focused on the final prosthetics.

Triplett reflects on profession, friendship with award namesake Robert V. Walker

Dr. Robert G. Triplett, Regents Professor in oral and maxillofacial surgery, recently received the Robert V. Walker Distinguished Service Award from the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons. For Triplett, the award is even more meaningful and humbling because he personally knew and admired the man for whom the award is named.

Triplett was a first-year resident in Bethesda, Maryland, 50 years ago when he met Walker, a 1947 alumnus of Texas A&M College of Dentistry, which was known then as Baylor University College of Dentistry. "He was a magnificent and inspiring individual who cared deeply about his patients and oral and maxillofacial surgery education. He was a strong leader, clinician and humanitarian," says Triplett, who was "fortunate to know him socially and professionally."

Triplett was recognized at the AAOMS 2020 Virtual Annual Meeting, Scientific Sessions and Exhibition in October. The full-time faculty member at the College of Dentistry—who is also an attending surgeon at Baylor University Medical Center and Scottish Rite for Children was honored for significant contributions to oral and maxillofacial surgery.

DCDS member Dr. Robert G. Triplett recently received the Robert V. Walker Distinguished Service Award from the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons.

"We have been so fortunate to have had Dr. Robert Triplett as an outstanding member of the faculty for 29 years," says Dr. Lawrence Wolinsky, dean. "His impact on the practice and profession of oral and maxillofacial surgery, our students and alumni and, most importantly, the patients he serves is immeasurable."

In 1998, Triplett was named Regents Professor by The Texas A&M University System Board of Regents. He chaired the College of Dentistry's oral and maxillofacial surgery department from 1991 to 2007 and served as interim chair from 2019 to 2020. Triplett has authored more than 100 peer-reviewed articles. He served as chief of the oral and maxillofacial surgery division at BUMC from 1991 to 2020 and was primary liaison between the hospital and the dental school. Triplett served 21 years with the U.S. Navy Dental Corps.

Fourth year dental students who participated were impressed with the activities. "Although it was hard to interact with students through Zoom, it was a nice reminder of how rewarding it can be to work with children and have an impact on their lives," explained Texas A&M dental student Andrew Ho. "Many children don't have the knowledge or resources when it comes to knowing how to keep up with oral health. It's important to try to help these children early on so that they can have success later on in life in keeping up with their oral hygiene. Helping these kids is a great step in setting a foundation for a healthier community." Fourth year dental student Ashly Okoli is equally enthusiastic. "Working with Dr. Trieu was an amazing experience. She effortlessly engages the children and challenges them to think about their oral hygiene and dietary habits. I found myself interested because her delivery is upbeat and seamless. The students were eager to participate and they came ready with a number of questions. I look forward to continuing outreach with children in our community, and I am enthusiastic about pursuing pediatric dentistry as it will give me the

Follow DCDS and SWDC on social media!

I've been taking my team to the Southwest Conference every year since graduating dental school. Even before graduating Baylor College of Dentistry, I attended as a hygienist and before that as a chairside assistant. I can count on one hand the number of SWDC (Midwinter) meetings I may have missed since moving to Dallas in 1978. The Southwest Dental Conference is a standing tradition in my dental life and I always look forward to taking my staff. They enjoy getting out of the office and attending as a team. It really builds moral.

The Scientific Committee has developed a program with the entire team in mind. I try to spread my team out over as many classes as I can. Instead of sending my hygienists to a class on periodontal therapies, I will be sending them to Dr. Steve Bender's presentation on TMJ diagnosis and sleep issues. Topics they are asked about every day in practice. I urge you to look beyond what you might consider to be a doctor-only or a hygiene-only topic and mix it up a bit. Send your assistants to see Dr. Scott Keith, who is discussing which technologies you should be utilizing in your office for better, more predictable outcomes. If your assistants are going to be capturing scans or taking digital images, then they should be comfortable with the technology you've invested in.

If your team wants to stay together for the day of learning, we have that covered too. Cathy Jameson, PhD, will keep everyone engaged and alert. She packs our ballrooms every time she is with us. Even if you've seen her before, her material is always evolving, always current.

A sure "don't miss" this year will be Dr. John Molinari. He will have the most recent updates from the CDC along with hand hygiene, waterline contamination prevention and the latest vaccination recommendations. The ever-popular CE express will return for the 2021 conference. These one hour CE credits from some of your favorite presenters allows you the freedom to come and go as topics rotate leaving you plenty of time in between to visit the showroom floor.

On behalf of my co-chair, Dr. Missy Jaynes and the DCDS Scientific Committee, I offer a heartfelt invitation to join us August 20-21, 2021. We expect to be meeting in-person, and I know I'm ready to see everyone again. We missed you last year and we can't wait to see you in August.
